ARBORY PLAYERS

Our Man

by

Daniel Clucas

We hear a lot about the "unconscious" side of the brain - ever wondered what goes on in there?

This play is set inside the head of Private Jones, an ordinary soldier on active duty somewhere away from his home and family.

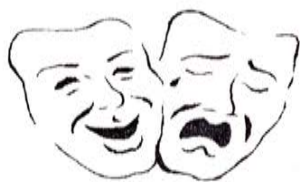

It is the day of the final battle and it is Sir's job to ready "Our Man" for the day ahead, organising the senses into what he hopes will be a "lethal fighting machine". The senses however, are succumbing to fatigue, homesickness and fear becoming easily distracted and fuddled.

Can Sir motivate the senses to bring Our Man through the battle?
